

BUILDING A HOME? REMODELING A KITCHEN?
RENOVATING A BATHROOM?
UPDATING AN APPLIANCE OR FAUCET?

Seek your inspiration at Skanadario.

*Experience
"Beautiful Water."*

Intelligent Zen

Interior design by
Sharon Flatley, CMKBD, ASID,
Flatley & Associates

Photography by
Dan Flatley, Flatley Images

As part of a gradual room-by-room transition of a traditional red brick home in Dallas to contemporary interiors, the owners Jeffrey and Shoshanna Goodman wanted a Zen-like spa atmosphere for their master bathroom; reminiscent of the W Hotel in New York where they were married. As the plumbing showroom for the project, the Goodmans already knew what they wanted: floating vanities and specific products from their Skanadario by Goodman Supply showroom, like an air tub from Acryline, a steam bath, and an heater under the tile to name a few. However, when it came to space planning and putting everything together, Sharon Flatley stepped in and was instrumental in positioning the two floating vanities, large tub, separate shower space, creating storage, as well as determining functionality, selecting finishes, and resolving differences.

For the Zen-like elements, tumbled pebbles were used on the floor of the shower and texture was added on the floor at each vanity by carving out some pebbled areas. Frosted, glass Shoji screen doors lead into the bathroom extending the Zen atmosphere into the master bedroom as well. The faucets are sensor faucets that save water, an example of intelligent design, which Flatley believes is important and essential in every design.